Fostering and Adoption in Islamic Law – Under Consideration of the Laws of Morocco, Egypt, and the United Arab Emirates

by Andrea Büchler and Eveline Schneider Kayasseeh
Fostering and Adoption in Islamic Law – Under Consideration of the Laws of Morocco, Egypt, and the United Arab Emirates
by Andrea Büchler* and Eveline Schneider Kayasseh

Table of Contents

I. Introduction .................................................................................................................................................. 32
II. Filiation in Islamic Law ................................................................................................................................. 32
III. Adoption in Islamic System and Society ..................................................................................................... 35
IV. The Fosterage of Children (Kafalah) in Classical and Modern Islamic Law ........................................ 40
V. Appraisal and Concluding Remarks ............................................................................................................. 54

Abstract

The importance of family and lineage runs like a golden thread through Islamic history, thought, and law. However, many children around the Islamic world are deprived of the opportunity to develop and grow up in their own biological families. With the aim to preserve blood ties as the only means of legitimate filiation, adoption is prohibited in most countries influenced by or based on Islamic law or Shari’a. For this reason, alternative forms of adoption have been developed as well as a model of legal fostering called kafalah. A kafalah enables children deprived of a family environment to be legally raised on a permanent basis by families other than their own. First, this paper looks at the legal framework of filiation and kafalah in classical Islamic law. Second, three modern-day approaches on regulating kafalah as a means of child protection will be outlined. We have chosen three countries from the Arab world with different legal-historical backgrounds, namely Morocco, Egypt, and the United Arab Emirates. The three countries have enacted child-specific legislation as well as specific legislation on the regulation of fosterage of children, of kafalah. We will look at similarities and differences among the three legislative frameworks and pinpoint benefits and risk factors.

* Andrea Büchler is a Professor for Private and Comparative Law at the University of Zurich, Law Faculty, andrea.buechler@rwi.uzh.ch
 Eveline Schneider Kayasseh, Dr. iur., is a former senior research assistant and project manager at the University of Zurich, Faculty of Law.
I. Introduction

Orphans and children deprived of family care have been a social reality since ancient times, and so have ways to care for such children. These ways differ from culture to culture. Whereas in the “West”, adoption in the sense of creating legal filiation between adopter and adoptee has served as the main instrument to integrate abandoned and orphaned children into new families, in Islam, it is generally not regarded permissible. Most Muslim-majority states maintain this prohibition today. However, Islamic law provides for a legal alternative called kafalah. With the increase of movements and migration across continents and countries, family formation across borders has become a widespread phenomenon, and the institution of kafalah has become internationalised.

The following article on fostering and adoption of children will take departure in classical Islamic law by considering what the classical sources have to say to legitimate filiation, orphans, adoption and fostering. In order to illustrate the modern relevance of the classical law, we will outline what the concept of kafalah entails, what its legal prerequisites and implications are, and how the laws of three different Muslim-majority countries deal with legal parentage and fostering.

II. Filiation in Islamic Law

1. Establishment of Filiation

The importance of family and lineage runs like a golden thread through Islamic history and thought. From a linguistic point of view, lineage is established through father and mother; however, in the legal sphere lineage refers to the agnatic line of descent only, which is a result of the paternalistic structure of society. The paternal tie defines and determines several seminal rights and duties in Islamic law; in itself, it is a right that gives other rights. The rights given by the paternal relationship include custody and guardianship, maintenance, rights of citizenship and name, and, importantly, inheritance.

In particular, the father must provide his offspring with clothing, food, shelter and education until they reach maturity (in case of a boy) or marry (in case of a girl). The term used in Islamic law for paternity in the sense of lineage is nasab. In many cultures and up to this day, the relevance of a person’s kin is shown by the use of patronyms (ben, bint, i.e., son, daughter of) which highlights the importance of the paternal tie. In order to have a proper nasab, certain preconditions must be fulfilled.

a) Children Born in Wedlock

In Islamic law, proper filiation to the father is established by procreation under the further condition that the parents of the child were legally married at the time of conception of the child. To the

---

1 See e.g. SHABANA AYMAN, The Islamic Law of Paternity between Classical Legal Texts and Modern Contexts: From Physiognomy to DNA Analysis, Journal of Islamic Studies, Vol. 25 (2014), 1-32, at 1, 3.
2 WELCHMAN LYNN, Women and Muslim Family Laws in Arab States, Amsterdam 2007, at 143.
3 See e.g. CLARKE MORGAN, Islam and New Kinship, New York 2009, at 96.
4 Referring to a male genealogical line, nasab has been described as “the most fundamental organising principle of Arab society”. See ROSENTHAL FRANZ, Nasab, in: BEARMAN PERI et al. (eds.), Encyclopaedia of Islam, 13 Vol., Leiden 1997-2009, at 967.
mother it is established by birth. The requirement of marriage is linked to the criminalisation of extramarital sex, called zinā, which is one of the very few crimes against God for which a set punishment (hadd) is demanded by the Quran and the Sunna (the basic sources of Islam). In addition, the marriage requirement serves to maintain "genealogical clarity". A well-known fiqh principle confirms the interconnectivity of marriage, procreation and nasab as well as a desire to uphold proper sexual mores in society. It says that "the child (belongs to) the conjugal bed" (al- walad li-l-firāsh).7

In classical Islamic law, marriage is a civil contract that requires the contracting parties to be of sound mind, have attained puberty, and have consented to the marriage. Muslim men of legal capacity typically contract their own marriages, while women must usually have a guardian in marriage, a walī, who contracts their marriage for them. Marriage is concluded by the offer (ijāb) of one contracting party and the acceptance (qabūl) of the other, occurring at the same time before two – generally male – witnesses.8 The marriage contract is classified by different degrees of validity which have a bearing on the legitimacy of the child born from this union: valid (sahih), irregular (fāsid), and void (ḥātīl) marriages.9

Legitimacy presupposes birth during a regular or irregular (but not void) marriage within specific pregnancy terms and with consummation having been possible. In order to avoid illegitimate birth, the Islamic jurists set minimum and maximum terms of gestation which are rather generous: A child is deemed legitimate if born after six months of pregnancy and up to two or even more years of pregnancy depending on the school of law.10 one can be their mothers except those who gave them birth [...]". See e.g. Art. 146 Moudawana which states that filiation to the mother has the same effects irrespective of legitimate or illegitimate birth.

9 See PEARL/MENSKI, supra n. 7, at 143 ff.; see also NASIR, supra n. 5, at 75 ff.; ESPOSTO, supra n. 8, at 17.

10 Based on Quran (31:14) and (46:15), there is a consensus among Islamic jurists regarding the minimum period of gestation at six months. The maximum term of gestation was in contestation among Islamic jurists, ranging from two (Hanafi School of Law) to four (Shafi’i, Maliki, and Hanbali School of Law) or even more years, thus potentially minimising illegitimacy and adultery accusations. In Shia Islam, there is a consensus that one year is the maximum period of gestation; according to some jurists, this period might be shorter. See KHAN ARIF ALI/KHAN TAUQR MOHAMMAD, Family Law in Islam, in: Encyclopedia of Islamic Law, Vol. 5, New Delhi 2009, at 188; BAKHTIAR LALEH, Encyclopedia of Islamic Law, Chicago 1996, at 456 ff.; NASIR, supra n. 5, at 146. Among the codified rules of family law that have been adopted in Arab countries in the present and past centuries exist provisions pertaining to the minimum and maximum term of pregnancy. Regarding the maximum term of pregnancy, legislators have introduced a one-year rule into most Arab Personal Status Laws as a substantive rule or rule of procedure, citing medical authorities as support. WELCHMAN, supra n. 2, at 143; see also NASIR, supra n. 5, at 146.
Modern state laws are also rather generous in their presumption of a child’s legitimacy and thus in granting nasab. This is at least true as long as there is a claim of marriage between a particular woman and a man. Thus, children born from a marriage of doubtful validity or children born following an “engagement” of her or his parents may be considered legitimate.\(^{11}\) In addition, parentage is often considered to be an indication of the existence of a marriage as the principle generally holds that the establishment of lineage establishes wedlock and not vice versa.\(^{12}\)

b) Other Forms of Filiation

Apart from marriage, parentage (and with it legitimacy) may also be established through acknowledgment by the father, the mother\(^{13}\) (who is neither married nor in her iddat\(^{14}\)) or the child. Iqrār requires that four basic conditions are met (which are varied slightly to fit the respective individual). First, the child must be of unknown parentage; second, there must be a certain age difference between father and child so that parentage is plausible;\(^{15}\) third, the father must indicate that the child is legitimate and not the offspring of zina; fourth, if the child is of age, he or she must agree to the acknowledgement. If the mother is married or in her waiting period, her acknowledgement shall only establish the paternity of the husband if this individual confirms the acknowledgement.\(^{16}\) Finally, aside from marriage and iqrār, the Islamic religious legal texts acknowledge other means of establishing parentage to a child: al-bay‘ina (evidence) and al-qyafa (the comparing of physical characteristics).\(^{17}\) Used in classical times, physiognomy (especially the characteristics of the feet) was mainly used in cases where paternity was contested between two or more men.\(^{18}\) The rules of al-bay‘ina have been codified under some modern family laws such as Morocco, Tunisia and Algeria.\(^{19}\) 13 It must be pointed out, however, that not all schools consider the acknowledgment of a woman valid: See Bargach, supra n. 5, at 60; Khan/Khan, supra n. 10, at 210. See also Esposito, supra n. 8, at 27.

---

14 Waiting period following death of the husband or divorce during which a woman is not allowed to get remarried. Regarding the iddat, see Esposito, supra n. 8, at 20 ff.; Nasir, supra n. 5, at 137 ff.

15 See Pearl/Menski, supra n. 7: real paternity must be possible, i.e., the acknowledger must have reached the minimum age of puberty and the minimum period of gestation must have passed by.

16 Concerning the whole, see Nasir, supra n. 11, at 176; Khan/Khan, supra n. 10, at 214. See also Esposito, supra n. 8, at 27; Nasir, supra n. 5, at 150 ff.; Khan/Khan, supra n. 10, at 210 ff. Further see Landau-Tasseron, supra n. 7, at 176.

17 In detail see Shabana, supra n. 1, at 8 ff. – Some schools also accept “drawing of lots” (al-qyafa) as a valid means to establish paternity if one is unable to determine the paternity of a child by other means: Sujimon M. S., The Treatment of the Foundling (al-Laqt) According to the Hanafis, Islamic Law and Society, Vol. 9 (2002), 358-385, at 378.

18 See Sujimon, supra n. 17, at 374 ff., who discusses in which cases the Hanafis accepted physiognomy as proof of paternity. See also Al-Azhary Sonbol Amira, Adoption in Islamic Society: A Historical Survey, in: Warnock Fernea Elizabeth (ed.), Children in the Muslim Middle East, Austin 1995, 45-67, at 53 f. See Bargach, supra n. 5, at 60, on the revival of this practice in modern times.

19 See Nasir, supra n. 11, at 178; Bargach, supra n. 5, at 60.
2. Effects of Filiation

Only a child that is born legitimately can become a full member of society. In order to protect the child’s legitimate status, once the legal bond to the father is established, it is difficult to break it. As an example, a husband may only deny paternity under a valid marriage contract by claiming that his wife was infidel. If the father has not previously acknowledged his paternity or confirmed the acknowledgment of the mother or the child, he may start a judicial procedure called li’ān by claiming under oath that his wife committed adultery and dispute his parentage whereas the wife denies these allegations. Under these circumstances, the judge will rule the separation of the spouses which amounts to an irrevocable dissolution of marriage and to the illegitimacy of the child.

3. Effects of Lack of Filiation

Anyone born outside of marriage is considered an “illegitimate child”. He or she will be deprived of the support that the father and his family owe legitimate children and will take the mother’s name. This is considered a shame in societies where patriarchal lineage is highly valued, especially for boys who are expected to pass on lineage through their name.

Particularly unwed mothers who give birth will face harassment from family and community members. In extreme cases, unwed mothers may fear for their lives if family members perceive the illegitimate birth as a transgression against “family honour”. In addition, they may be tried and punished for adultery (zini). Given the social stigma of illegitimacy, mothers often see no alternative other than to abandon the baby in the hope of giving him or her a “better life” in a loving family, and sometimes also to protect their already existing family and their own life.

III. Adoption in Islamic System and Society

1. Historical Background

In a historical perspective, the concept of adoption as of giving the child the status of one’s own rightful offspring by adopting him or her was not foreign to what we call today the “Middle East”. Before the advent of Islam, in the Jahiliyya, or pre-Islamic period, adoption (tabannī from the Arabic word ibn, which means “son”) was practiced in the sense of creating a permanent parent-child relationship.

20 NASIR, supra n. 5, at 119, 147 f.; NASIR, supra n. 11, at 119, 172; see also PEARL/MENSKI, supra n. 7, at 400; AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 50; KHADEM, supra n. 10, at 205; WELCHMAN, supra n. 2, at 142; Quran (24:6-9). NASIR, supra n. 5, at 148 and idem, supra n. 11, at 172, points out that father and child would remain un-marriageable to each other.

22 On the situation of women who have children out of wedlock see, e.g., BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 133; ABDUL-HAMID YARA, Child Rights Situation Analysis Middle East and North Africa, A Report Commissioned by Save the Children Sweden, Regional Office for the Middle East and North Africa, 2nd edition, Beirut 2011, at 77, 110. See also FISHER BETSY, Why Non-Marital Children in the MENA Region Face a Risk of Statelessness, Harvard Human Rights Journal Online, January 2015, 1-8, at 5f. It must be highlighted that the profiles of mothers who decide to give up their newborn-borne highly. Also, there are myriad reasons why mothers decide to take this step.
relationship between persons biologically not related to each other. In pre-Islamic tribal Arabia, it is presumed that adoption mainly took place to strengthen the work force of clans and tribes for economic and defence reasons and in order to safeguard progeny.

In these patriarchal societies, the adoptees were usually male, some were free men and others freed slaves, and some of them took the name of the adopting father. The adoption could take place at any time in a person’s life and irrespective of whether their parents were still alive or not. Indeed, solid data regarding the function and effects of adoption do hardly exist. What is certain though, is that adoption became widely absent in the Middle East after the advent of Islam.

The origins of the prohibition of adoption are not quite certain. Some argue that by prohibiting adoption the prophetic message aimed at replacing the traditional tribal bonds with the sense of belonging to the Islamic community, the umma. Others refer to textual evidence which underline the importance of biological ancestry and the episode known as the “Zayd incident”.

After having adopted the former slave Zayd Ibn Ḥaritha, Mohammad desired to marry his cousin Zainab bint Ġaḥš who was Zayds former wife and his ex-daughter in law. However, the marriage was considered incestuous according to existing customs and rules. According to Islamic tradition, the Quranic verses (33:37-40) were revealed in this context. These verses as well as the later revealed verses (33:4-5) asserted the legality of the Prophet’s marriage to Zainab. It was argued that since adoption was prohibited and had no effect, the Prophet had no male child and therefore Zainab did not become his daughter in law. From then on, “adopted” children could no longer take the name of their adoptive parents and there were no marriage impediments between them and no mutual rights of inheritance.

---

23 There is some disagreement in the doctrine regarding the prevalence of adoption in pre-Islamic times. See LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 171 ff., who points to the fact that the number of recorded adoptions was in fact very small. But see AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 46, who maintains that widespread adoption was the norm.

24 Cf. AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 46. See also MATISON INGRID, Adoption and Fostering, in: Suad Joseph (ed.), Encyclopedia of Women & Islamic Cultures: Family, Law, and Politics, Leiden 2003-2007, at 1: Since the adoptive parents would manage the orphan’s property, self-interest was oftentimes at the bottom of adoption.

26 MATISON, supra n. 24, at 1; LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, 173.

27 LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 170; AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 46.

28 LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 170; AL-AZHARY, supra n. 7, at 48; BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 133.

29 SUJIMON, supra n. 17, at 370.

32 See MATISON, supra n. 24, at 1; Quran (4:5). There are other Quranic verses and ahādīth (sing. ḥadīth) which are considered to support this belief: see the references in AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 51 and SAYED MOSA, The Kafalah of Islamic Law – How to Approach it in the West, in: Maunsbach Ulf et al. (eds.), Essays in Honour of Michael Bogdan, Lund 2013, 507-520, at 510.

33 See LANDAU-TASSERON, 169; AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 48, 52

34 See LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 169; SAYED, supra n. 32, at 509.

35 Cf. LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 169; POLLACK et al., supra n. 7, at 733 f.

36 See e.g. BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 134.
2. Contemporary Perspective

Referring to the outlined textual evidence, Muslim legal scholars agreed generally and without delay that creating a new legal and permanent parent-child relationship by terminating existing legal bonds through adoption is not permissible in Islam. “Artificial” filial bonds were viewed as non-compliant within a system that puts an emphasis on clear bloodlines as an integral part of traditional patriarchal societies. Filial relationships created without procreation could furthermore confound the idea of family as a quasi-divine institution. It was also feared that lineages might be mixed by procreation between members of the adoptive family and the adoptee.

In most of today’s Muslim-majority countries, the legal institution of adoption is absent or banned. Some countries accept adoptions only for certain persons, notably non-Muslims. For example, in countries where different sets of laws exist for different creeds, Christian families may adopt children from Christian orphanages. However, the ban on adoption does not imply that children deprived of family are left without care. Children are often cared for in informal ways. Indeed, the only legal alternative to adoption is kafalah.

3. Informal Alternatives to Adoption

Various verses in the Quran address the issue of orphans and the duties and proper conduct of the believer towards those children. According to these texts, orphans should not be mistreated or cheated, but be treated fairly, kindly and generously. The holy book of Islam encourages the charitable upbringing of orphans and describes God as their ultimate caregiver. According to Islamic tradition, the Prophet Muhammad, who was an orphan himself (he had lost his father), asked believers to provide for orphans, irrespective of whether related to them or not.

In Islamic jurisprudence, a foundling is considered a fellow Muslim and as such a holder of the same rights and bearer of the same duties as others. The classical fiqh books (the books of Islamic jurisprudence) discuss extensively his or her rights as well as the duties and the proper conduct of 37 It is important to mention that there are scholars who do not fully agree that adoption in the modern sense does necessarily conflict with Islamic teachings. PEARL DAVID, Textbook on Muslim Family Law, Croom Helm 1987, at 91; SAYED, supra n. 32, at 511.

---

38 The rationale behind this is the fact that sexual relations with adopted family members are not religiously forbidden (an adopted non-biological child would not be seen as mahram – i.e. non-marriageable). See CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 72 f.; BAGCAH JAMILA, Orphans of Islam: Family, Abandonment, and Secret Adoption, ISIM Newsletter, no. 11 (2002), 18, at 18; idem, supra n. 5, at 75 ff; PEARL/MENSKI, supra n. 7, at 408.

39 NASIR, supra n. 5, at 153 f. Exceptions from this rule are Tunisia and Turkey.

41 See e.g. SAYED, supra n. 32, at 512.

42 AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 55. – An example is Quran (4:36): “[...] And do good – To parents, kinsfolk, orphans, those in need [...]”. See also e.g. Quran (4:127); (93:9); (107:1-3).

43 See Quran (93:6).

45 This position is based on the notion that it is piety that characterizes a Muslim and not her or his lineage (nasab) or wealth (hasab). See BAGCAH, supra n. 5, at 62; idem, supra n. 38, at 18; CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 77. See also Quran (6:164): “Each soul draws the meed of its acts on none but itself: no bearer of burdens can bear the burden of another.”
the finder of such a child. In these texts, the finder of an abandoned child has the individual duty to care for the baby if the child is at risk of dying or the person voluntarily took custody of the baby. Otherwise, taking care of a foundling is considered to be a communal responsibility and the non-fulfilment of this religious duty a communal sin.

In reality though, people often shy away from taking in an orphan because he or she could be perceived as being a “fruit of sin”. Traditionally, not all orphans are considered “equal”. There is a distinction between a child who has lost one or both parents (yatīm) and the foundling (laqīt – the root word of this term means something that is “picked up”) who is a child of unknown parentage. Those with unknown origin are often equated to an illegitimate child, a walad zinā, and carry the stigma of a suspected immoral act by their birth-parents. As a result, they often face a lifetime of marginalization and discrimination as well as difficulties in finding a marriage partner or a job and additionally, a lack of familial financial support or protection. From a religious point of view however, the fostering of a child in need is considered to be a sign of piety. Nevertheless, the establishment of “fictive” descent or kinship is not possible.

Since the care for abandoned or orphaned children was not institutionalised in historical times, the taking in of orphans was quite common. The first so-called orphanages in the medieval period were little more than schools where children were trained to become soldiers or state officials by the Ottomans and the Mamluks. In the case of the Mamluks, the relationships between the masters and their recruits often closely resembled adoption as the child was integrated into the household and would form close ties to his foster family.

46 See Bargach, supra n. 5, at 61; Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 52, 57, referring to the original definition of laqtā as “that which is picked up”.
47 Cf. Pollack et al., supra n. 7, at 736; Nasir, supra n. 11, at 178 f.; idem, supra n. 5, at 155; Bargach, supra n. 5, at 61.
49 E.g. Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 52.
50 From a “Western” perspective, an orphan is regularly a child who has lost mother or father or both parents, either because they died or have abandoned the child permanently. Today, various definitions are used by states and international institutions for defining whether a child is an orphan. The United Nations Children Fund (UNICEF) labels any child that has lost at least one parent as an orphan, irrespective of the way he or she was conceived. See <http://www.unicef.org/media/media_45279.html>, accessed 01 June 2018.
51 See Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 52; Clarke, supra n. 3, at 76 ff.; Bargach, supra n. 38, at 18; also critical of the “blame” transferred to the child: Thomsosn, supra n. 14, at 138.
52 See Fisher, supra n. 22, at 4ff.; Abdil-Hamid, supra n. 22, at 77, 92, 110, 137, 144, 161, 167, 190, 205; Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 60; Thomason, supra n. 14, at 143; Ahram Online, 5 April 2013: “Egyptian orphans still suffering on their National Day”, available at <http://english.ahram.org.eg/NewsContent/1/64/68132/Egypt/Politics-/Egyptian-orphans-still-suffering-on-their-National.aspx>, accessed 01 June 2018. – Notwithstanding the fact that in legal theory, the children should not be blamed for immoral acts of their parents, but be judged on merit of their ‘taqwa’ (godfearing, virtue).
53 Mattson, supra n. 24, at 1; Sayed, supra n. 32, at 513.
54 Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 58.
56 Al-Azhary, supra n. 18, at 58 f.
With the raise of modern nation states, governments assumed social responsibilities and functions and the establishment of orphanages became quite common.⁵⁷ Some of today’s orphanages are run by the state and some are supervised by the state, but run on a private initiative, such as religious foundations, individuals or the community.⁵⁸ In some cases, orphanages do not only care for children with no known family, but also act as a social institution which cares for children whose parents are in a difficult social situation.⁵⁹

There have always been orphans but also families who cannot conceive naturally. They could neither expand their family tree nor shed love on a child and ensure her or his well-being.⁶⁰ It should not come as a surprise that so-called “informal adoptions” were and are practiced in various “culturally sanctioned forms”,⁶¹ sometimes by using hilah shar’iyah (legal ruse).⁶² For example, a man may claim an infant of unknown provenance (who is not the offspring of unlawful intercourse) as his legitimate child, provided that there is no evidence to the contrary (acknowledgment – iqrar).⁶³ As long as the formal elements of the claim are intact, the child will be considered the biological son or daughter of the claimant and acquire all concomitant rights and duties.⁶⁴ Furthermore, a man may claim a child was the legitimate offspring of a former marriage that has previously not been registered under the man’s name.⁶⁵ A child may also be adopted secretly by aspiring parents who take in an abandoned baby and then raise him or her as their own child by pretending to have given birth without informing the authorities.⁶⁶

It also happens that related persons exchange children. Especially in the Maghreb, such family or customary adoptions are widespread.⁶⁷ ⁶⁸ In Moroccan Arabic this form of “adoption” is called trebi. Such adoptions take place quite informally by extended family members or close acquaintances taking in and caring for a child that is biologically not their own. For example, a child may be entrusted to a family without children or with only boys or only girls through an informal transaction without legal procedure.⁶⁹ The ties between an “adopted” child and her or his biological family are usually not ruptured; the child keeps her or his last name as well as the inheritance rights. Trebi can be seen as an infinite visit where guardianship is transferred to the host family. Even ⁵⁷ Regarding the evolution of institutional care for orphans in Egypt, see RUGH ANDREA B., Orphanages in Egypt: Contradiction or Affirmation in a Family-Oriented Society, in: Warnock Fernea Elizabeth (ed.), Children in the Muslim Middle East, Austin 1995, 124-141, at 130 ff.

⁵⁸ See AL-AZHIARY, supra n. 18, at 59.
⁵⁹ AL-AZHIARY, supra n. 18, at 60; see also RUGH, supra n. 57, at 124, 126 f.; CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 75.
⁶⁰ For an insight into the shift in the value of a child over time see Clarke, supra n. 3, at 80 ff. On iqrar, see Khan/Khian, supra n. 10, at 210; Nasir, supra n. 5, at 150 ff.; see also YASSARI, supra n. 30, at 1062.
⁶¹ CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 80 ff. On iqrar, see Khan/Khian, supra n. 10, at 210; Nasir, supra n. 5, at 150 ff.; see also YASSARI, supra n. 30, at 1062.
⁶² LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 187, with historical evidence.
⁶³ CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 80 ff. On iqrar, see Khan/Khian, supra n. 10, at 210; NASIR, supra n. 5, at 150 ff.; see also YASSARI, supra n. 30, at 1062.
⁶⁴ LANDAU-TASSERON, supra n. 7, at 172 f.; CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 80 f.; SUJIMON, supra n. 17, at 372 f.
⁶⁵ CLARKE, supra n. 3, at 80.
⁶⁶ AL-AZHIARY, supra n. 18, at 60 f.; BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 27 f.
⁶⁷ See e.g. BARRAUD ÉMILIE, Kafâla transnationale: Modalités de formation des familles kafilates de France, Autrepart, no 57-58 (2011/1), 247-261, at 249.
⁶⁹ See idem at 249, 253; BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 136.
though the host family will not incorporate the child legally, emotional ties between the host parents, siblings and the entrusted child will most likely develop quite naturally.\(^{70}\)

Another form of “alternative adoption” is the creation of milk kinship (\textit{ridā‘}), a relationship with special rights under Islamic law.\(^{71}\) The child nursed by the foster mother will be regarded as the milk-sibling of the wet nurse’s biological children. In this case, the child may still not inherit from her foster parents, but it is barred from marrying any of the mother’s biological children.\(^{72}\) In some countries, the nursing of small foster children (younger than two years old) is encouraged by the authorities in order to prevent issues with religious prescriptions, such as the veiling of female family members when the – biologically unrelated – foster child gets older.\(^{73}\) Milk kinship may create a basis for co-operation and solidarity between unrelated people, but has otherwise no legal consequences.\(^{74}\)

\section*{IV. The Fosterage of Children (\textit{Kafalah}) in Classical and Modern Islamic Law}

\subsection*{1. In General}

\textit{Kafalah}, which derives from the Arabic root verb of ka-fa-la, meaning “to take care”, or \textit{ḍamān}, “to guarantee”,\(^{75}\) is the Islamic equivalent to “Western” adoption. This legal institute, rooted in the law of contract and obligations rather than in family law,\(^{76}\) is based upon the traditional understandings that oppose fictive filiation and encourage fostering of abandoned or orphaned children.\(^{77}\)

\textit{Kafalah} is usually described as a form of legal guardianship or tutelage that aims at creating a permanent arrangement for a child deprived of a family environment. Basically, two kinds of \textit{kafalah} exist: a consensual \textit{kafalah}, which shall only be addressed in passing here, whereby a \textit{kafalah} arrangement is made between two private parties, and a legally binding contract between state authorities as wardens of an abandoned child and a family or single person.\(^{78}\) The latter kind of \textit{kafalah} shall be the focus of this paper.

Unlike in legal parenthood, there are no mutual rights and duties in a \textit{kafalah} arrangement. The so-called \textit{kafil} makes a commitment by contract, usually in front of a notary or judge to maintain, guard and educate the \textit{makfoul} (child taken into \textit{kafalah}) in the same way, as they would do for a biological

\begin{thebibliography}{99}
\item \textit{Barraud, supra n. 67}, at 248; \textit{Bargach, supra n. 5}, at 29. In its other meaning, \textit{kafalah} serves as a kind of sponsorship system used in the context of migrant labourers mainly – but not exclusively – in the Gulf countries.
\item \textit{Bargach, supra n. 5}, at 29 f., 42, 177; see also \textit{Welchman, supra n. 2}, at 148.
\item \textit{Barraud, supra n. 25}, at 133; \textit{Idem, supra n. 67}, at 247; \textit{Le Boursicot Marie-Christine}, La Kafâla ou recueil légal des mineurs en droit musulman : une adoption sans filiation, Droit et cultures, no. 59 (2010), 283-302, marginal no. 1-5; \textit{Sayed, supra n. 32}, at 51.
\item In more detail, see \textit{Bargach, supra n. 5}, at 28.
\end{thebibliography}
Fostering and Adoption in Islamic Law

by Andrea Büchner and Eveline Schneider Kayasseh

A feature of this commitment is its quasi-definitive nature or permanence by which the kafil usually commits to support the makfoul until his or her legal maturity. But due to the contractual nature of the relationship, the legal, moral, educational, and financial duties towards the child may vary. The feelings, however, can be equally strong as in biological child-parent relationships, which is expressed in the way care-takers speak of their wards, namely as “adopted children.”

In contrast to adoption in Western systems, kafalah does not establish a legal parent-child relationship between the kafil and the makfoul and it does not end the legal relationship between the legitimate parents and the child. Hence, core rights or privileges of nasab, such as family name and proportionate inheritance entitlements usually do not accrue to the minor taken into kafalah. However, the person taking in a minor under kafalah is indeed free to assign certain portions of their assets to the makfoul since the Quran encourages Muslims to leave part of their wealth to those who are dependent on them. In practice, bequests often tend to attenuate the inequality between biological children and minors taken in under kafalah as well as providing a form of social security for such children. Therefore, from a functional point of view, kafalah appears to be close to adoption; from a legal perspective it has similarities to foster care. Its structure and historical as well as socio-cultural background make it an institution in its own right.

The laws of certain Muslim majority countries regulate kafalah as a means of child protection. The details of how kafalah is operated in practice, especially its modalities and procedures, largely depend on the laws of the respective states. Common features are the kafil’s religion (usually he or she must be a Muslim) and his or her mental, financial and personal suitability to this role as well as the child’s 79 See e.g. SAYED, supra n. 32, at 513; Fact Sheet No. 50, Specific case Kafalah, International Social Service, International Reference Service for the Rights of Children Deprived of their Family.

80 BARRAUD, supra n. 67, at 248; DUCA, supra n. 31, at 52. However, because it is based on a contractual agreement, the kafil may only owe a select number of moral, educational, financial and other duties towards the child taken into kafalah: BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 29.

81 See e.g. Al Jazeera, 6 March 2015: “Adopting Orphans Breaking Taboos in Dubai”, available at <http://www.aljazeera.com/news/2015/03/adopting-orphans-breaking-taboos-dubai-15030280741099.html> accessed 01 June 2018. – But, as everywhere, there are other realities as well. In Morocco namely, notarial kafalah arrangements, especially regarding minor girls, sometimes have another function that does not serve the child’s best interest at all: children taken into kafalah must serve as domestic helps, traditionally called “petites bonnes”. Often, those children are subject to sexual exploitation and abuse. BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 137 f., states that the (single) mothers of these children had frequently been “petit bonnes” themselves.

82 Either fully or in part: SAYED, supra n. 32, at 509.

83 BARRAUD, supra n. 67, at 248; BARGACH, supra n. 25, at 134; BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 28.

84 Cf. AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 50; ARSHAD RAFFIA, Islamic Family Law, London 2010, at 177 f., 187. – According to Islamic jurisprudence (fīqh) – both Sunni and Shia – a person may bequeath a maximum of one-third of their estate to an unrelated person or give it to them as a gift. See POWERS DAVIS STEPHAN, The Development of Islamic Law and Society in the Maghrib: Qāḍīs, Muftīs and Family Law, Farnham 2011, at 12; MOUSSA REZIZ, Les Aspirations Confictuelles du Droit de L’Adoption: Études Comparatives, Arab Law Quarterly, Vol. 19 (2004), 147-168, at 155; BARRAUD, supra n. 67, at 248.

status as “abandoned”. In the following paragraphs, we will have a brief look into the kafalah or fostering-regulations of three countries with a different legal-historical background, namely Morocco, Egypt and the United Arab Emirates.87 Due to the constraints of this article, the focus will be on some central aspects of the relevant laws rather than an in-depth study of the legal situation.

2. Kafalah in Morocco, Egypt and the United Arab Emirates

a) Morocco

The Kingdom of Morocco is a constitutional monarchy in the Maghreb region of North Africa. The religious affiliation of the country is predominantly Muslim with a Christian and Jewish minority. The Moroccan legal system is a mixed system of civil law based on French law and Islamic law. The Constitution of Morocco describes the State as a constitutional, democratic, parliamentary and social monarchy, as well as “an Islamic sovereign state” and accords Islam the status of state religion.88 The majority of Moroccans are Sunnites.89

aa) Family Law and Lineage

Until the late fifties, the law applied in family matters were the rules of classical Islamic law based on dominant Maliki doctrines. Since then, traditional family law issues including marriage, divorce, child custody and maintenance as well as inheritance are governed by the Code of Personal Status, also known as Moudawat al-usra, or Moudawana (as it will be called hereinafter). The Moudawana was last revised in 2004 and is based on Islamic law.90 The law is in principle applicable to all Moroccans irrespective of faith; the Jewish citizens apply their own laws.91

For Muslims, the laws of Morocco retain the principle that nasab is tied to legitimate birth. Paternity is assumed when a child is born in wedlock.92 Nasab, or paternity, “is a legitimate bond between the father and the child that is transmitted through the generations.”93 The Moudawana enumerates three alternatives to establish legitimate male filiation: the conjugal bed, acknowledgment or sexual intercourse by error.94

91 Art. 2 No. 1 and No. 4 para. 2 Moudawana.
92 Art. 152-154 Moudawana.
93 Art. 150 Moudawana.
94 Art. 152 Moudawana.
The conjugal bed is considered to be an irrefutable proof of paternity. It is proven by the same means that is used to prove the marital relationship.\textsuperscript{95} If the conjugal bed meets these requirements, the husband can only contest paternity through a sworn allegation of adultery committed by his spouse or by means of an irrefutable expertise upon two conditions: First, the husband must present solid proof of his allegations; and second, the issuance of a judicial decision ordering the expertise.\textsuperscript{96} The child rendered illegitimate by court order or by birth does not have any rights vis-à-vis her or his father.\textsuperscript{97} Because this creates great hardship, several methods are considered to be an acceptable proof of paternity: the conjugal bed, the father’s acknowledgement, the testimony of two public notaries, oral testimony and by all other legal means, including judicial expertise.\textsuperscript{98}

According to Article 147(1), the three alternatives to establish legitimate filiation to the mother are birth, acknowledgment, and judicial decision. In its second paragraph, the Article adds that maternal filiation is legitimate in cases of marriage, sexual relations by error and rape. Moreover, it states that filiation to the mother has the same effect whether the child is the offspring of a legitimate or an illegitimate relationship.\textsuperscript{99} Thus, in contrast to the articles regulating legitimate filiation to the father, the relevancy of the subcategory in the Moudawana regarding legitimate maternal filiation remains unclear.\textsuperscript{100}

The Moroccan family law states that adoption has no legal value and does not produce any of the effects of legal filiation.\textsuperscript{101} Children without parental care can be taken into kafalah instead.\textsuperscript{102}

\textit{ab) The Fosterage of Abandoned Children (Kafalah)}

\textbf{In General}

In 2013, the Ministry of Justice reported that Morocco was dealing with a staggering number of 5,377 cases of abandoned children, or nearly 15 per day.\textsuperscript{103} Various reasons explain this figure. Mothers who give birth out of wedlock are often considered to be a shame for their families, since family honour bases on the marriageability, which in turn depends on the virginity of daughters.\textsuperscript{104} Often, these women are poor, homeless, sex workers or maids who are already socially discriminated.\textsuperscript{105}

Children born outside of marriage are socially heavily stigmatised as they are considered being “unworthy” and children of sin with the concomitant social rejection and marginalisation.\textsuperscript{106} In addition, mothers run the risk of being the subject of criminal prosecution, because childbirth is the visible proof for an extramarital sexual relationship. Morocco does not apply the classical penalties

\textsuperscript{95} See Art. 10 ff. Moudawana, Art. 16 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{96} See Art. 153, 159 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{97} Art. 148 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{98} Art. 158 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{99} Art. 146 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{100} KREUTZBERGER, supra n. 6, at 63.
\textsuperscript{101} Art. 149 Moudawana.
\textsuperscript{102} For a short history of the legal kafalah in Morocco and Algeria see BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 134 f.
\textsuperscript{104} SAYED, supra n. 32, at 514.
\textsuperscript{105} See the profiles of single mothers described in BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 15, 133.
\textsuperscript{106} SAYED, supra n. 32, at 514.
for zinā, but extramarital sex remains a crime punishable by a prison sentence of one month to one year (unmarried people) and one to two years (adultery).

Prerequisites

The Moroccan law on kafalah came into force in 1993 and was last revised in 2002. According to the legal text, abandoned children are registered by the public prosecutor (Royal Prosecutor). They are given a fictive first name and surname as well as a fictive filiation by adding a mother’s and father’s first names. Until kafalah is established, abandoned infants are placed in state or private run orphanages or are given into the custody of a foster family.

In order to place a child into a family under kafalah, the first administrative measure that needs to be undertaken is the legal establishment of the child as being abandoned. According to the law, an “abandoned child” means anyone below the age of eighteen who is abandoned, orphaned or with parents who are incapable of exercising their parenthood. The Royal Prosecutor shall request the declaration of abandonment on his own initiative or at the request of a third party. The competent judge starts an investigation into finding the child’s parents. If it is proven that the child falls within one of the situations provided for in the first article of the law, he shall declare by judgment that the child is abandoned. An abandoned child is under the guardianship of the Minors judge affiliated with the competent court.

The proceedings start with an application to the competent judge at the place of residence of the abandoned infant by the party requesting to take the child into kafalah. The party must supply the judge with a copy of the birth certificate of the abandoned child as well as documents proving that they fulfil the following conditions:

- The person or persons intending to take a minor into kafalah can be a Muslim couple or a Muslim single woman. In addition, the applicants must have full legal capacity, as well as the social and moral capability to exercise guardianship over the child. They must have sufficient means to support the child financially; be free of contagious diseases or diseases that render them incapable to undertake their responsibility; they should neither be in a legal battle with the child whom they request to take into kafalah or with her or his parents; and lastly, there should be no family dispute in existence raising concerns regarding the best interests of the child.

---

107 Art. 490-491 Moroccan Penal Code.
108 Dahir no. 1-02-172 du 1 rabii II 1423 (13 juin 2002) portant promulgation de la Loi no. 15-01, relating to kafalah of abandoned minors (Moroccan Kafalah Law).
109 BARRAUD, supra n. 67, at 248; BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 135. Loi 15-1 relative à la prise en charge des enfants abandonnés promulguée par le dahir no. 1-02-172 du 13 juin 2002.
110 KREUTZBERGER, supra n. 6, at 66; BARGACH, supra n. 5, at 3 f., 195 ff., 204.
111 Art. 3-7 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
112 Art. 1 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
113 Art. 2-4 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
114 Art. 7 para. 2 Moroccan Kafalah Law; SAYED, supra n. 32, at 515.
115 Art. 14 I, 9 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
116 Interestingly, in Tunisia where plain adoption is permitted the Muslim faith is not a prerequisite for adoption. See YASSARI, supra n. 30, at 1063.
117 Art. 9 No. 1 and 2 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
The role of the kafil can also be assumed by charitable organisations and institutions with sufficient financial and organisational means to protect, to educate the child, and to raise it according to the precepts of Islam.\(^{118}\)

Until recently, international kafalah placements in favour of nationals living abroad or in favour of foreigners were practiced as long as the applicants would respect the procedural conditions (e.g. the conversion to Islam). On 21 September 2012, Justice Minister El Mostapha Ramid published a notice that appears to indicate that the right to kafalah should only be granted to Muslim families who reside in Morocco.\(^{119}\)

If the before-mentioned prerequisites are met, the judge assisted by a commission investigates the specific case especially by assessing the suitability of the applicants to exercise kafalah. Before a decision is taken, the child over twelve years old must give his or her personal consent, except in cases where the applicant is a legal entity rather than a natural person.\(^{120}\) If more than one party applies to take the kafalah of a child, spouses without children or those who are deemed particularly suitable to serve the child’s interests will be given preference.\(^{121}\)

If the applicants are deemed suitable, the judge makes a ruling providing them with the right of kafalah. The decision will be executed within 15 days from the court ruling.\(^{122}\)

Effects of the Decision on Kafalah

The party (a person or an institution) given the right to kafalah is appointed legal guardian of the child by the aforementioned court ruling. The kafalah parents have to respect the best interest of the child, which is one of the central concerns of the law and reiterated in numerous passages.\(^{123}\) In particular, the kafalah parents have the responsibility to take care of the child, as well as guaranteeing custody of the child up to legal maturity.\(^{124}\) This means that the kafalah parents have to make sure that the child grows up in a healthy environment catering to his or her physical and psychological needs and that he or she is given an education.\(^{125}\)

The law stipulates that the kafalah parents are to take care of the child in the same way as if the child were their biological offspring according to the relevant rules in the Moudawana concerning guardianship and maintenance.\(^{126}\) Therefore, in case of a girl, maintenance continues until her

---

\(^{118}\) Art. 9 No. 3 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

\(^{119}\) See Bundesamt für Justiz (BJ), Adoption Marokko, available at <https://www.bj.admin.ch/bj/de/home/gesellschaft/adoption/berkunftslaender/marokko.html> accessed 01 June 2018. However, according to the text of the law, a departure from Morocco of the person/persons undertaking the kafalah is possible subject to the authorisation of the competent Minors Judge (Art. 24 Moroccan Kafalah Law).

\(^{120}\) Art. 12, 16 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

\(^{121}\) Art. 10 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

\(^{122}\) Art. 17 f. Moroccan Kafalah Law.

\(^{123}\) E.g. Art. 25 Moroccan Kafalah Law: Cancellation of the kafalah by court decision if required by the best interest of the child. – The Moroccan Kafalah law thus aligns to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UN-CRC), which states in its Art. 3 that “in all actions concerning children (…) the best interests of the child shall be a primary consideration”.

\(^{124}\) Art. 2 Moroccan Kafalah Law; Art. 166 Moudawana. According to Art. 209 Moudawana, the age of legal maturity is 18 Gregorian years.

\(^{125}\) Sadly though, in some cases children and particularly girls, are “used” as cheap labour through the act of kafalah. Arguably, this is one reason why the orphanages are full of boys only. See BARRAUD, supra n. 21, at 157 f.; LISTON, supra n. 48, at 10.

---
The kafalah parents intending to endow the child or make inheritance dispositions in her or his favour must do this under the supervision of the competent judge at the place of residence of the child taken into kafalah. As already mentioned, according to Islamic jurisprudence (fiqh) – both Sunni and Shia – a person may bequeath a maximum of one-third of their estate to an unrelated person. Gratification (jaza) or testamentary adoption (tazil) provided for by the Moudawana may accord the child the position of an heir of the first rank, but does not prove legal filiation. These types of adoption are governed by testamentary rules.

Termination of Kafalah Placement

The kafalah placement comes to an end when the child reaches the age of legal maturity if the child or his kafalah parents or kafalah mother die, or if the kafalah parents or the kafalah mother become legally incapacitated. Furthermore, the kafalah placement is revoked if the kafalah parents fail to provide for the child in accordance with the rules foreseen by the kafalah law or do not perform the kafalah. The judge may also terminate the kafalah placement if the best interests of the child so necessitate.

Divorce of the kafalah parents may also terminate the kafalah placement. However, upon application from the kafalah father or mother, or an official acting in the public interest or ex officio, the judge may – by again assessing the suitability of the applicant – decree the continuation of the kafalah or another measure. At the same time, the biological parents may reclaim the child at any time if the reasons for abandonment cease to exist.

---

127 Art. 22 Moroccan Kafalah Law; Art. 198 para. 2 and 3 Moudawana. The kafil benefits from social benefits and allowances dedicated to parents with children. Also, the kafil is liable for the acts of his or her “adoptive” children: Art. 22 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

128 Art. 2 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

130 See Art. 20, Loi no. 37-99 relative à l’état civil; Dahir no. 1.02-239 du 3 octobre 2002; Further: FORTIER, supra n. 21, at 9; BARRAUD, supra n. 25, at 135 f.

131 Art. 23 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

133 The kafalah will not end at that age for a non-married girl, a handicapped child or a young adult who is unable to support themselves financially.

134 Art. 19, Art. 25 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

135 Art. 26 Moroccan Kafalah Law.

136 Art. 29 Moroccan Kafalah Law.
b) Egypt

The Arab Republic of Egypt is the most populous country in North Africa and the Arab World. The great majority of its people are adherents to Sunni Islam, with a considerable minority of Coptic Christians and other Christian denominations. The Egyptian legal system encompasses Islamic law and a system of codified laws. Egypt’s supreme law is its written constitution. According to its provisions, the principles of the Islamic Shari’a are the main source of legislation and Islam is the religion of the state.

ba) Family Law and Lineage

Egypt neither does have a unified personal status law that applies to all religious denominations, nor are the rules of Egyptian Muslims personal status law codified in a comprehensive code. For Muslims, matters of family are regulated by the Egyptian Personal Status laws which are informed by the dominant view of the Hanafi School of law. The scholarship of the Hanafi School of law is also used for gap-filling purposes.

There are quite a few substantive laws dealing with personal status. These include for instance Law No. 131 of 1948, the Egyptian Civil Code; Decree-Law No. 25 of 1920 regarding Maintenance and some Questions of Personal Status; Decree-Law No. 25 of 1929 regarding certain Personal Status Provisions; Law No. 100 of 1985 amending decree-laws No. 25 of 1920 and 1929 as well as procedural laws. Religious minorities like the Coptic Christian population apply their own religious rules to personal status matters, provided that the parties to the dispute belong to the same faith, and that there are no legal provisions and court judgments which are applicable to all Egyptian citizens irrespective of their faith.

---

138 Art. 2 of the Constitution of the Arab Republic of Egypt of 2014, unofficial English translation available at <http://www.sis.gov.eg/Newvr/Dustor-en001.pdf> accessed 01 June 2018. At the same time, the constitution states that Christians and Jews have the right to follow their religious laws “regulating their personal and religious affairs”. It also grants them the right to select their own religious leaders (Art. 3 Constitution).

140 The law currently in force is Law No. 1 of 2000 organizing Certain Conditions and Procedures of Litigation in Matters of Personal Status (amended by Law No. 91 of 2000). Further laws include: Decree-Law No. 118 of 1952 on rules of guardianship over one-self; Decree-Law No. 119 of 1952 on rules of guardianship over money; Law No. 62 of 1976 amending certain rules concerning maintenance; Law No. 1 of 2000 regarding the Promulgation of a Law to Organize Certain Conditions and Procedures in Matters of Personal Status (mainly procedural in nature but also containing two important substantive provisions, namely no-fault divorce (khul’) and the right of the wife to divorce in the context of an unregistered marriage); Law No. 4 of 2005 amending Article 20 of Decree-Law No. 25 of 1920 (raising the age of custody); Law No. 126 of 2008 amending the provisions of the Child Act (No. 12 of 1996, “Child Law”); See MOUSSA JASMINE, Competing Fundamentalisms and Egyptian Women’s Family Rights: International Law and the Reform of Sharia-derived Legislation, Leiden 2011, at XIX.

In Egypt, the principle of al-walad li'il-firāsh establishes legal paternity. According to Egyptian law, courts may not hear any paternity claims if there was no physical contact between the spouses after their marriage or if a child was born more than one year after his or her father’s absence or more than one year after the divorce of the parents (or the father’s death). The other means of establishing nasab is acknowledgement (iqrār). In order to prove legitimate filiation, witnesses and scientific methods may be used. Furthermore, legitimate filiation may be proven by al-bayīna (evidence). Denial of paternity may arise through the procedure of li'an. Even though the Egyptian personal status law does not deal with the li'an procedure, courts hear such cases on the basis of the rules for lacunae in the relevant laws and the according Islamic schools of law’s acceptance of such procedure.

According to Egyptian laws, members of the Coptic Christian church may adopt children but Muslims may not. However, Muslim citizens may turn to secret informal adoption, for instance through acknowledgment (iqrār) or in the case of someone finding an abandoned newborn baby and raising the baby without informing the authorities. The declaration of paternity is prohibited where one parent is in wedlock with a party other than the biological parent of the child in question.

bb) The Fosterage of Abandoned Children (Kafalah)

In General

Children are regularly abandoned in Egypt. The causes for abandonment are numerous and diverse and include poverty, unwanted pregnancies, rape and 'urfi (customary) marriages as well as misfar (temporary) marriages. According to the Children’s rights group FACE, which gives assistance to street children and orphans, there are at the present officially 6500 orphans throughout 238 legally recognised institutions in Egypt. However, numbers are probably much higher as several institutions

---

144 Art. 15 of the Decree-law no. 25 of 1929 regarding certain Personal Status Provisions. See SHAHAM RON, Law versus Medical Science: Competition between Legal and Biological Paternity in an Egyptian Civil Court, Islamic Law and Society, Vol. 18 (2011), 219-249, at 229 f. According to Hanafi doctrine, the minimum term of pregnancy is six months.

145 EBERT/HEFNY, supra n. 139, at 36. Regarding the scope and limits of the use of modern medical technology in paternity cases see SHABANA AYMAN, Paternity between Law and Biology: The Reconstruction of the Islamic Law of Paternity in the Wake of DNA Testing, Zygón, Vol. 47 (2012), 214-239, at 216 ff. In particular, see Art. 4 Law no. 126 of 2008 (“Child Law”): “The child shall have the right to establish his legitimate paternal and maternal lineage, using all lawful scientific means in order to establish such lineage.”

146 EBERT/HEFNY, supra n. 139, at 36.

147 FAWZY, supra n. 138, at 41.

148 The relevant rules for Coptic citizens are formulated in the Personal Status Law for the Orthodox Copts of 1938 in Art. 110-123 of the said law. For an overview, see ROWBERRY RYAN/KHALIL JOHN, A Brief History of Coptic Personal Status Law, Berkeley Journal of Middle Eastern and Islamic Law, Vol. 3 (2010), 81-139. For Muslim citizens, see Art. 4 para. 3 Child Law.

149 EBERT/HEFNY, supra n. 139, at 36.

150 Al-Azhary Sonbol, 60.

151 Art. 22 para. 1 No. 2 Child Law.

152 An 'urfi marriage is an unregistered marriage not celebrated by a state representative and will only produce certain legal effects.

are not recognized and some operate on an illegal basis.\textsuperscript{154} Furthermore, it is estimated that tens of thousands of children live on Egypt’s streets, however not all of them are orphans.\textsuperscript{155} Also, some of the children left in orphanages know who their parents are but often these parents are unable to care properly for the children due to poverty or a prison sentence.\textsuperscript{156} Illegitimate children are often abandoned due to shame and the fear that relatives would harass the mother due to her status as a woman who committed zinā. Regardless of their background, orphans bear the stigma of illegitimacy and are even regarded as a “source of evil”.\textsuperscript{157}

According to Egyptian child law, any infant found abandoned in the streets must immediately be delivered either to the police or to an institution designated to receive new-borns which in turn will notify the police. They will record all data regarding the child and the finder.\textsuperscript{158} A doctor will then estimate the age of the child, and the child receives a name. The relevant data is then included in the birth registry.\textsuperscript{159} The law also provides for alternative or foster care for children without parental care.\textsuperscript{160} The fostering of children is further detailed in the ‘Fostering of Children Regulations’.\textsuperscript{161}

In January 2015, Egypt amended its child law to lower the age when children can be raised by foster parents from two years to three months allowing non-institutional support of orphans and other children in need nearly from birth.\textsuperscript{162,163}

\textbf{Prerequisites}

Under Egyptian law, the following children are eligible for foster care: illegitimate children; abandoned children; children who lost their parents and whose location or place of residence cannot be located by the child nor by the relevant authorities; children whose parents are unable to look after their offspring due to social reasons.\textsuperscript{164}

\begin{itemize}
\item AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 60.
\item See e.g. idem.; RUGH ANDREA B., Orphanages in Egypt: Contradiction or Affirmation in a Family-Oriented Society, in: Warnock Ferna Elizabeth, Children in the Muslim Middle East, Austin 1995, 124-141, at 126 f.; THOMASON, supra n. 14, at 131 f.; Ahram Online, 5 April 2013, "Egyptian orphans still suffering on their National Day", available at <http://english.ahram.org.eg/NewsContent/1/64/88132/Egypt/Politics-Egyptian-orphans-still-suffering-on-their-National.aspx> accessed 01 June 2018.
\item However, this person may lawfully choose not to give her or his details to the police. In case of known parents, there are instances where their names will not be included in the child’s records, notwithstanding their personal wishes: See Art. 20 para. 3 and Art. 21 Child Law of 2008.
\item Art. 20 Child Law. MEGAHEAD/CESARIO, supra n. 152, at 469; THOMASON, supra n. 14, 125 f.; AL-AZHARY, supra n. 18, at 61.
\item Art. 4 para. 3, Art. 46 Child Law.
\item Prime Minister Decree No. 2057 for 2010 issuing the Executive Regulation for the Child Act No. 12 of 1996: Fostering of Children Regulations (kafalah). In the following, this Regulation will be termed “Egyptian Kafalah Law”.
\item Law No. 6 of 2015; see Arabstoday, 24 January 2015: “Fostering age for abandoned kids lowered to 3 months in Egypt”, available at <http://www.arabstoday.net/en/women/also-in-the-news/fostering-age-for-abandoned-kids-lowered-to-3-months-in-egypt.html> accessed 01 June 2017. Children at such a young age can be breastfed. Breastfeeding creates a relationship similar to those who are related by blood. This means that the child suckled in infancy is not eligible for marriage to the milk-mother’s other children or husband and the family members may mingle relatively freely even after the milk-child has reached puberty.
\item Regarding milk-kinship, see idem.
\item See Art. 85, 86 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.
\end{itemize}
Applicants wishing to take a child into kafalah must be married, whereby one of the spouses should be of Egyptian nationality; they should have the same faith as the child, be between 25 and 55 years of age and married for at least five years. Furthermore, they must be psychologically and physically healthy, have an income sufficient to provide for the family unit, live in a proper environment with, inter alia, educational and medical facilities, and have enough time to handle the fostering of a child. Finally, they must prove their ability to jointly cover the needs of the family and provide the child taken into kafalah with financial and social security. Also, they must give the solemn promise to preserve the ancestry of the child.

Single women, divorcees and widows over the age of forty-five may foster children upon approval by the Alternative Families Committee.\(^{165}\) The number of children in the applying family should not exceed two, unless they are old enough to depend on themselves. Prospective foster parents must also obtain approval from the Social Solidarity Directorate to provide foster care for more than one child.\(^{166}\) After a process, which includes a background check by a social worker and the submission of the relevant documents, the Family and Childhood Administration reviews the application which then presents the application as well as the social survey report and other relevant documents to the Alternative Families Committee of the relevant governorate for decision-taking. If the family’s application is approved, the applicants have to sign a foster care contract.\(^{167}\) If the application is rejected, the applicants are entitled to appeal it.\(^{168}\)

Effects of the Decision on Kafalah

The foster family has the duty to look after and care for the foster child as a family member and to comply with the relevant authorities regarding the child’s future as well as informing them regarding any change in the child’s social status, residence and circumstances.\(^{169}\) The orphaned child or child with unknown ancestry may add the name of her or his foster family as her or his own, yet without gaining any natural inheritance rights.\(^{170}\) Notwithstanding this, the foster parents may bequest one-third of their estate to an unrelated person such as a foster child.\(^{171}\) In addition, they may bestow money or property upon the child during their lifetime.\(^{172}\)

The law provides that social specialists shall oversee the welfare and progress of the child,\(^{173}\) and entitles foster parents to certain benefits during and after the end of the foster care period.\(^{174}\)

Termination of Kafalah Placement

The family foster care continues until boys reach the employable age and girls marry.\(^{175}\) If the foster family infringes upon the regulations of the relevant law, for instance by not following the directives

---

\(^{165}\) Art. 89 No. 2, 93 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{166}\) Art. 89 No. 4 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{167}\) Art. 90, 93, 101 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{168}\) Art. 90 para. 5 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{169}\) Art. 89 No. 7, No. 11, Art. 91 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{170}\) Art. 92 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation. See also MOUSSA, Egypt, supra n. 141, at 16f.

\(^{171}\) The Islamic inheritance laws are codified into Law No. 77 of 1943 and Law No. 71 of 1946.

\(^{172}\) See also Art. 99 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{173}\) Art. 89 No. 9, 102 f. Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\(^{174}\) See Art. 95 ff. Egyptian Kafalah Regulation. of the social worker or by conducting a lifestyle that negatively influences the psychological or physical health of the foster child, it may be terminated earlier. The kafalah placement may also come to an end if either of the foster parents dies\textsuperscript{176} or the child is returned to its biological family.\textsuperscript{177}

c) United Arab Emirates

The United Arab Emirates (UAE) is a federation established in 1971 in the area previously known as the Trucial Coast in the Persian Gulf, consisting of seven Emirates, namely Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Sharjah, Ras Al Khaimah, Umm Al Quwain, Ajman and Fujairah. The majority of its citizens are adherents to Sunni Islam with Christian, Shia and Hindu minorities. Approximately four-fifth of the population are migrant workers who reside in the country temporarily. They are predominantly Muslims, Christians and Hindus.\textsuperscript{178}

According to the UAE Constitution, Islam is the official religion of the federation, and Islamic law (Shari’a) a main source of legislation.\textsuperscript{179} As a federation, it has two sets of laws: On the one hand, federal laws and decrees which make up the legal framework of the federation, and on the other hand, the laws and regulations of the individual Emirates. The Emirates have the jurisdiction over subject matters that are not assigned by the Constitution to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Government as well as the right and duty to implement federal laws through local laws and regulations.\textsuperscript{180}

\textit{ca) Family Law and Lineage}

In the relatively short period since its establishment, the UAE has passed many important laws. Yet until recently, there was no codified family law in the UAE and the law applied in family matters were the rules of classical Islamic law based on dominant Maliki doctrines. In 2005, the UAE passed its first codified family law, the Federal Law on Personal Status.\textsuperscript{181} It covers a wide range of issues considered to be in the realm of family law, such as marriage and divorce, issues arising during and after marriage, rules pertaining to children, and inheritance.\textsuperscript{182} The law applies to all citizens as long as the non-Muslims among them (mostly Hindus) do not have their own laws; non-citizens have a choice to subject themselves to the law.\textsuperscript{183}

According to the UAE Personal Status Law, the \textit{nasab} to the mother is acquired through birth.\textsuperscript{184} In order to be legitimately affiliated to the father and acquire a \textit{nasab}, the law requires that the child\textsuperscript{179}

\textsuperscript{175} Art. 87 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\textsuperscript{176} See Art. 100 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\textsuperscript{177} Cf. Art. 89 No. 11 Egyptian Kafalah Regulation.

\textsuperscript{179} Art. 7 Federal Constitution of the United Arab Emirates.

\textsuperscript{180} See Art 116 ff., 120, 121, 122 and 125 UAE Constitution.

\textsuperscript{183} Art. 1 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.

\textsuperscript{184} Art. 60 No. 2, 90 f. UAE Federal Law on Personal Status. The minimum and maximum terms of pregnancy are 180 and 365 days respectively, “unless a medical committee established for this purpose decides otherwise”.

\textsuperscript{170} Art. 116 ff., 120, 121, 122 and 125 UAE Constitution.
must be born under a valid marriage within the minimum term of pregnancy after the conclusion of the marriage contract. If the spouses think they are legally married but the marriage contract is defective, the child is attributed to the husband if he or she is born within the minimum terms of pregnancy counted from the time of consummation of the (defective) marriage. The other alternatives to establish nasab are acknowledgement, evidence and “scientific methods if the conjugal bed is established”. Here, the law refers to methods such as DNA-testing. In any case, for illegitimate offspring paternity cannot be established. Extramarital relationships are considered a crime under the UAE Penal Code.

The husband can refute paternity through the traditional process of li’an if he has not admitted to his paternity or consented in the child’s being attributed to him previously. During the court proceedings, the judge can have recourse to “scientific methods” in order to clarify the question of paternity. If the li’an procedure is successful, the child will not be attributed to the wife’s husband and the spouses will be separated definitely.

Marriage is the exclusive framework for licit sexual relations and legitimate offspring. Because sex outside of marriage is illegal, the women – many of whom are migrant workers – often conceal their pregnancies and abandon their babies shortly after giving birth. The UAE does not endorse a system of adoption that severs a child’s lineage to her or his biological parents. As such, the UAE laws do not expressly prohibit adoption, but it is commonly agreed that UAE nationals, which are mostly Muslims, cannot adopt. They should turn to fosterage instead which is considered as a worthy deed and permitted according to the precepts of Islam.

cb) The Fosterage of Abandoned Children (Kafalah)

In General

Until 2011, the fosterage of children was not regulated in the UAE. In early 2012, the UAE President Shaikh Khalifa Bin Zayed Al Nahyan issued a law on the protection and care for abandoned children. The law created a system involving the Ministry of Social Affairs and the Ministry of Interior to provide care for children without parental support and lays down the criteria and process by which foster families are being chosen. The law not only aims at securing the care of abandoned children in order to secure their health, education and social integration, but also stipulates their 185 180 and 365 days respectively, “unless a medical committee established for this purpose decides otherwise”, see Art. 89ff. UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.

---

186 Art. 89 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.
187 WELCHMAN, supra n. 2, at 145.
189 Art. 96, 97 No. 1 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.
190 Art. 97 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.
191 Art. 96 No. 1 and Art. 97 No. 2 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.
193 Adoption is possible for foreign, non-Muslim expatriates living in the UAE. The adoption process follows the rules of their own national laws.
protection from abuse and cruel treatment. This is in line with Article 16 of the UAE Constitution which states: “Society shall be responsible for protecting childhood (...) and shall protect minors and others unable to look after themselves for any reason, such as illness, disability (...). It shall be responsible for assisting and enabling them to help themselves for their own benefit and that of the community. Such matters shall be regulated by welfare and social security legislations.”

Prerequisites

According to Federal Law 1 of 2012 on the care for abandoned children, an abandoned child is one found inside the borders of the UAE who has no known parents. Anyone who finds an abandoned infant must deliver him or her to the police including anything found on the child. The police notify the Public Prosecutor and hand over the child to the designated health centre. A doctor estimates the age of the infant and gives him or her the necessary care. The Public Prosecutor then assigns the child to an orphanage with the approval of the two involved ministries. There, the child is given a name. According to the law, abandoned children are eligible for Emirati citizenship.

Anyone wishing to take a child into kafalah must be an Emirati national residing in the UAE; he or she must be Muslim and married and be at least 25 years of age. According to the relevant law, single men are not eligible and single women (unwed, widowed or divorced) must be at least 30 years of age. Further, the hosting family or single mother should be free from infectious diseases and should not suffer from psychological and mental disorders. The hosting family or single mother must be financially capable to provide a decent living to the foster child as well as the members of their own families, and they must not have a criminal record.

In the Emirate of Dubai, the Community Development Authority is the responsible authority for the care of abandoned children. The person or persons wishing to foster a child have to apply to the CDA by submitting a form accompanied by a number of documents (e.g., certificate of clearance of infectious diseases, salary certificate). A social worker assesses the family and their living circumstances through interviews and home visits. The Commission then decides on the eligibility of the family or single person and informs them accordingly. After placement, social workers monitor the wellbeing of foster children by visiting the foster families and by an annual health check.

---

195 Art. 2 UAE Abandoned Child Law.
196 Art. 1 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
197 Art. 3 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
198 This name shall not imply that the child is of unknown parentage. See Art. 3 para. 5 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
199 Art. 3(e) UAE Federal Law No. 17/1972 concerning nationality and passports, amended by Federal Law No. 10/1975; Art. 3, Art. 5 para. 1 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
200 See Art. 10 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law for the eligibility criteria.
201 Exceptions are possible: cf. Art. 10 para. 2 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
203 According to Art. 7, 8 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law, each Emirate has its own commission to identify eligible foster families.
204 See Art. 8, 9, 13 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
205 Cf. Art. 8, 12, 13, 14 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
Effects of the Decision

The child is referred to the family for a trial period of six months after which the foster care becomes permanent. Foster parents have to sign an undertaking that they will treat the child well, provide her or him with secure living conditions and that he or she may grow up in an Islamic and social environment. The law specifies that the foster parents are to take care of the child’s needs, such as giving it a home, clothing, and sustenance, and cater to the health and social life of the child according to his or her age. In addition, they must allow her or him to interact with other children, and provide for her or his education. The law further stipulates that fostering is a gift of care and that the foster parents are not entitled to any remuneration.

Since the foster parents are to take care of the child in the same way as if the child were their biological offspring, they must care and bring him or her up according to the rules laid down in the Personal Status Law. In case of a girl, maintenance continues until her marriage and in case of a boy until he is able to finance his own livelihood or he finishes his studies. If the male child is disabled or the female widowed or divorced, the maintenance obligation of the father continues or reverts to him. However, no inheritance rights are established to the foster parents. Indeed, according to Islamic law, they may bequeath a maximum of one-third of their estate to an unrelated person.

Termination of Kafalah Placement

The foster care ends when the child comes of age; foster parents fail to provide for the child in accordance with the rules of the law; or the biological parents come forward; or the foster child dies. In case of divorce of the foster parents or the death of one spouse, the continuation of the foster arrangement may be ruled.

V. Appraisal and Concluding Remarks

In the three countries under review, Morocco, Egypt and the UAE, adoption in the sense of integrating a child into one’s own family by legally giving him or her an equal status to the one of a biological child is either not legally possible, or not possible for people with certain faiths, namely

---

206 Art. 9 para. 2 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
207 Art. 5 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
208 Art. 15 UAE Abandoned Child Law.
209 See Art. 5, 10 UAE Abandoned Child Law.
210 Art. 78 UAE Federal Law on Personal Status.
212 According to Art. 85 UAE Federal Law on the Civil Transactions Law (Civil Code), a person comes of age at the age of 21.
213 Art. 14 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law provides the following: If the foster parents fail to comply with their rights and duties, they are reminded to discharge their duties. If they still fail to comply with the rules laid down by law, they are cautioned. If foster parents continue to disregard their duties, the fostering arrangement is put to an end, and another family is given the right to take the child into foster care.
214 If the biological parents reclaim the child, they must prove that they are the biological parents before the court issues a ruling to this effect, and the child will be re-registered: Art. 17 f. UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
215 Art. 20 para. 1 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law.
216 According to Art. 14 UAE Federal Abandoned Child Law, a relative may claim the right to foster the child in place of the deceased foster parent.
Muslims. By contrast, fostering is legally permitted in all three countries. A special emphasis is laid on the faith: In Morocco and the UAE, the applicants must be a Muslim couple or a Muslim single woman, in multi-faith Egypt, the couple or single woman must have the same faith as the child. In line with Islamic legal precepts, foster arrangements in these three countries have no effect on lineage like adoption. However, they offer a family-based solution for children deprived of family for reasons such as orphanage or birth out of wedlock by recognising the role family plays in the development and growth of young children.

In contrast to adoption, the fostering arrangements under review offer a certain flexibility allowing for adjustments in case the child’s individual situation changes; such may be given if reintegration into the birth family becomes possible or the arrangement with the foster parents does not work out in the best interest of the child. However, it must be pointed out that such revocation possibilities also have their downfalls, namely the uncertain legal status of the child, and possible emotional hardship. This said, under the national laws of Egypt, Morocco and the UAE fostering is designed to be a permanent arrangement for a child without parental care. The permanence factor is reflected in the fact that termination is only possible in special circumstances.

As has been outlined, nasab identifies the lineage of a person and typically is a patronym (i.e., name of the father) or a series of patronyms in both historical and modern Islamic legal frameworks. Lineage indicates the parentage of a child and consequently the establishment of all legal rights and claims. Since lineage can only be established through blood (kinship) and marriage, a child under kafalah will retain her or his father’s or mother’s name, if known, or will be named by officials, if unknown. Perhaps in an effort to atone the stigma of not having the father’s or family’s last name, in Morocco the child’s last name may be aligned to the kafil’s name by an official act, and in Egypt the foster family’s name might be added to one’s own. As far as can be seen, in the UAE the child keeps the name attributed to them by the officials. Furthermore, since the biological family bonds are preserved in all three countries by a fostering arrangement, the child has no inheritance rights towards their fostering parents. It is however possible to grant him or her limited inheritance rights by drawing up a will and thus enabling the child to inherit a certain portion of the foster parent’s fortune.

Modern-day fostering arrangements as mirrored in the laws of Morocco, Egypt and the UAE certainly have benefits for children deprived of a family environment. However, because of the obvious challenges of this type of system, effective monitoring and regular follow-ups by officials are vital components in order to prevent or deflect a placement for economic reasons and children’s exploitation. Also, the high prevalence of abandoned children namely in Egypt and Morocco highlights the need to develop preventive and inclusive programs for the support of single mothers especially. Besides their own “illegitimate” children, these individuals are most vulnerable in societies with patriarchal structures, where giving illegitimate birth (birth out of wedlock) may be considered as a transgression against “family honour”.