Woman press sexual assault charges on a man who performed mouth-to-mouth CPR on her.

San Diego, CA | A 23-year-old woman said she would not be dropping charges she pressed against a man who saved her life after she almost drowned in a pool during a pool party in her neighborhood. Kim Wright said David took advantage of her when she was helpless and she wants justice.

A video that shows David, a 29-year-old web developer, pulling Kim out of the water, pressing her chest a few times, and giving her a mouth to mouth before she coughs back into life will be used as evidence against David in court. Kim is arguing that David should have let someone else rescue her. She pointed out that he was playing with her breasts and the reason she woke up is probably because of the foul smell of David's mouth.

Talk about ingratitude at its peak. Odd world indeed 🤔🤔🤔🤔🤔
