Requirements of a contract

Art. 1108 Code civil

Four requisites are essential for the validity of an agreement:

- the consent of the party who binds himself;
- his capacity to contract;
- a definite object which forms the subject matter of the undertaking;
- a lawful cause in the obligation.

Art. 1325 CC - Requirements

The requirements for a contract are:

1.) agreement between parties (accordo);
2.) causa; ⇒ socio-economic function
3.) subject matter (oggetto);
4.) form (forma), when prescribed by law, under penalty of nullity.

Art. 1101 Code Civil

A contract is an agreement by which one or several persons bind themselves, towards one or several other to transfer, to do or not to do something.

Art. 1321 Civil Code (CC) - Definition

A contract is the agreement between two or more parties to constitute, regulate or extinguish a legal relationship having economic content.

Contracts for value/for mutual performance ⇔ Gratuituous contracts

Contract ⇔ Contrat / Contratto / Vertrag

Some contracts do not depend upon exchange (enforceable unilateral gratuitous promise)

Consideration

Consideration is based upon the idea of "reciprocity": that a promisee should not be able to enforce a promise unless he has given or promised to give something in exchange for the promise or unless the promisor has obtained (or been promised) something in return.

Cf Script p. 185

N.B: A valuable consideration, […], may consist either in some right, interest, profit or benefit accruing to one part or some forbearance, detriment, loss or responsibility, given, suffered or undertaken by the other (Carrie v Misa (1875) LR 10 Exch 153, 162).

Consideration means something which is of some value in the eye of the law, moving from the plaintiff; it may be some detriment to the plaintiff or some benefit to the defendant but in all event must be moving from the plaintiff (Patteson J in Thomas v Thomas (1842) QB 851, 859).

Consideration must be sufficient but it need not be adequate.

N.B: "A contracting party can stipulate for what consideration he chooses. A peppercorn does not cease to be good consideration if it is established that the promisee does not like pepper and will throw away the corn."

Having largely rejected formal requirements, English law developed a doctrine of consideration to play the principal role in selecting those agreements to be given a "badge of enforceability".

Enforcement of a claim

A promise not to enforce a valid claim is good consideration for a promise given in return, as is a promise not to enforce a claim which is doubtful in law.

On the other hand, it is clear that a promise not to enforce a claim which is known to be invalid is not good consideration for a promise given in return.

Part payment of a debt

Performance of an exisiting contractual duty owed to the promisor does not constitute consideration.

Similarly, a promise to accept part payment of a debt in discharge of the entire debt is not supported by consideration.

The debtor is already contractually obliged to repay the entire debt and so provides no consideration for the creditor's promise to accept part payment (unless, for example, the debtor agrees to repay the debt at an earlier date, in which case he does provide consideration).

Past consideration

A promise to reward somebody for acts which have already been performed in the past prior to the promise does not constitute consideration.

Past consideration means that consideration was already completed before the other party made his/her promise, so that nothing was given in return for the promise of the other party.

The rule that past consideration is not good consideration is closely linked to the bargain theory of consideration. The fatal objection is that there is no «reciprocity».

Causa ⇒ socio-economic function of the contract

The idea underpinning the notion of causa is that every transfer of wealth by one party to another requires a "justification". In other words, the transfer must be directed towards interests deserving of protection according to law (cf Art. 1322 CC).

According to Common law, a gift is not a contract since there's no consideration.
According to the Italian legal system, a gift is a contract.

The causa (socio-economic function of the contract) is conferred by the intention only to enrich the recipient (spirito di liberalità).

Example 1: If a small business grants, with no consideration, a patent which it holds, to a large company to which it is a supplier, the contract is void because there is no causa.

In fact: ⇒ the contract is not a sale, since no price is paid;

⇒ the contract is not an exchange; there is no consideration (different from the price);

⇒ the contract is not a gift, because there is not the intention only to enrich the recip.

Example 2: Bill promises to pay his debtor Paul the next day. Promise of payment

= Bill acknowledges that he is indebted to Paul = Acknowledgement of debt (IOU)

If Bill promises to pay € 1.000 reward to whoever finds his dog, an obligation arises (a public promise). Promise to the public ⇒ Will Bill be required to pay Paul following his promise of payment/recognition of debt? Does the promise of payment/acknowledgem. of debt generate an obligation?

Either Bill was already Paul's debtor before the promise/acknowledgement …

… in this case the obligation already existed, and thus does not arise from the promise/acknowledgement

… or Bill was not Paul's debtor before the promise/acknowledgement …

… in this case the promise/acknowledgement does not give rise to an obligation; in fact …

… every transfer of wealth requires a causa.

In summary: the notion of causa and consideration do not coincide. They are, however, both expression … of the mistrust of Legal systems of "unilateral" (= with no inherent payment) transfers of wealth. Clearly, in the case of the Italian Legal system, that holds for situations not expressly provided for by law.

It confirms mistrust of the Italian Legal system of gratuitous contracts

In contracts provided for by law with no «reciprocity», the mistrust of the Italian Legal system towards unilateral transfers of wealth is confirmed by additional elements restricting the "area of enforceability":(gift, gratuitous loan, guarantee etc.).

Real contracts

Explicit consent

⇒ But if no obligation arises, is a person free to promise anything he/she wants to a third person with no fear of legal consequences?

Inversion of the burden of proof (≠ Art. 2697 CC).

Form

1.) Private writing (scrittura privata) ⇒ it has to be signed;

2.) Written document with authenticated signatures (scrittura privata autenticata)

Signatures must be authenticated by an authorised person (generally, in contract law, a notary [notaio]).

If someone claims that the signature is false, that person must initiate a criminal suit ⇒ risk of criminal sanctions.

3.) Public deed ⇒ the content is "authenticated" (atto pubblico)

The authorised person (notary) ascertains that the content of the document corresponds with the will - as shown to him - by the declarants ⇒ eg, in the case of the gift of real estate

If someone claims that what the notary ascertained was declared to him is false, that person must initiate a criminal suit ⇒ risk of criminal sanctions.

⇒ Very strong* proof It covers: the signing in case of 2.) ⇔ the whole content in case of 3.)

Requirements of form are not a significant feature in English Contract law.

Formal requirements which are necessary in order to render a contract binding:

a.) - a contract must be evidenced in writing;

b.) - a contract must be made in writing;

c.) - a contract must be made by deed;

A document bearing the word deed or some other indication that it is intended to take effect as a deed must be signed by the individual maker of the deed.

Form requirements have three functions:

- Evidentiary function;
- Cautionary function ("it acts as a check against inconsiderate action");
- Chanelling function (formalities provide a simple and external test of enforceability).

⇒ What is the difference between a written contract and a contract evidenced in writing?

When a give Legal system prescribes the written form on pain of nullity, the question arises as to what has to be stated in written form.

1. According to Art. 1351 CC, every contract which transfers ownership or property interests in immovable property must be in writing.

2. Bill, the prospective seller of a right of usufruct in an immov. property, and John, the prospective usufructuary, reach an oral agreement as to the price.

⇒ Does the signing of the cheque book meet the form requirement laid down by Art. 1351 CC ?

Before handing over the cheque, John asks Bill to sign the cheque book as a "receipt".

3. In order to confirm his "willingness" to pay for the right of usufruct, John makes an advance payment of € 1.000 to Bill by cheque.

N.B: In order to meet the written form requirement, the reciprocal will to enter into the relevant contract has to be fixed in written form (including all essential elements of the contract parties intended to enter into).

Therefore a simple signature is not sufficient to meet the written form requirement for a sale of the right of usufruct in an immovable.

Parties to a contract did not put his will to, respectively, sell and buy the right of usufruct in writing … nor is there any way to determine – by merely referring to the cheque book - essential elements of the contract, for instance the price agreed and the right transferred.

A different rule applies when the Legal system requires the contract to be evidenced in writing. In this case some written memorandum or note of the contract is sufficient to meet the requirement to have a contract evidenced in writing.

Example:

Art. 1888 CC – Evidence of the contract (of insurance)

"A contract of insurance shall be evidenced in writing."

Even though the insurance tag does not indicate such essential elements of the contract as the premium paid, the risks covered, the limit of liability of the insurance company … it meets the requirement of "written evidence".

Written contract ⇔ Contract evidenced in writing

Written form refers to the contract

Written form refers to the evidence/proof

Digital/Electronic Signature

The idea underpinning digital signature is to have the same legal requirements inherent in signing any «tangible» document … even in the absence of such a «tangible» document.

⇒ What are the legal requirements implicit in signing a physical document?

DIGITAL SIGNATURE

«Tangible» document:

1.) imputability:	the document comes from the person who is the signatory;	Implicit in the signing
2.) integrity:	the document has not been altered;
3.) confidentiality/secrecy:	contents of the document can be known only by authorised persons;	Envelope postcard ⇔ letter
4.) inability to repudiate:	a party who has sent/received a message cannot deny having sent/received it;	Registered letter
5.) authentication:	identity of the author is witnessed by an authorised person (eg: notary);	Written document with authenticated signatures
6.) certainty of the date:	date is "authenticated" by an authorised person/"public body"	Postmark; (Uff. del Registro)

Digital/Electronic form ⇔ Tangible form
